

WINCART Community-Based Participatory Research (CBPR) Online Training Program

In response to the growing interest in community-based participatory research (CBPR) and the need for community and culturally appropriate CBPR educational resources, WINCART Center had developed an online training program to increase CBPR knowledge and skills among those interested in addressing cancer health disparities of Pacific Islanders. Through a series of eight steps participants will: (1) Learn the basics of CBPR, (2) Learn about the development of the WINCART CBPR model, (3) and explore available resources on CBPR, WINCART Center, and Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander culture.

This is a free and self-paced training that allows participants to view training videos at their own pace and a time that is convenient for them. The training composed of 2 online video training series, pre-and-post-test surveys, and a training questionnaire, which takes approximately 90 minutes to complete. A Certificate of Completion will be available for participants who successfully complete the program.

The WINCART CBPR Online Training Program a great educational resource for those who are interested in research in a community context, cancer disparities elimination among diverse populations, and/or CBPR projects in Southern California. If you have questions or are interested in enrolling in the program, please contact Mandy LaBreche, WINCART Program Manager, at alabreche@fullerton.edu.
